

Construction begins on new senior living center at Haggard Farms site

By Erick Pirayesh | 5:18 PM Jun 23, 2022 CDT
Updated 5:18 PM Jun 23, 2022 CDT

The Outlook at Windhaven, a new senior living center coming to Plano, is scheduled to open sometime in 2024. (Rendering courtesy The Outlook at Windhaven)

The Outlook at Windhaven, a senior living center, has begun construction on its new Plano location, according to a June 23 company release.

It will be located on the former site of Haggard Farms, just west of the northwest corner of West Spring Creek Parkway and Windhaven Parkway near Windhaven Meadows Park. The center will be owned and operated by Forefront Living, a health care and service management nonprofit based in Dallas. The community will be built on 18 acres and include 153 independent-living apartment homes, 30 independent-living cottage homes and 56 unit buildings for assisted living and memory care, the release states.

According to Carl Ede, principal and senior designer with the architecture firm Three that is building the center, it will have a high-end and hospitality-inspired aesthetic.

“The design takes inspiration from the beautiful, existing grove of trees along a small creek on the farmland where we’re building,” Ede said in a statement. “The cottages and other units are oriented so that the expansive windows offer views of the tree-lined setting.”

Ede said an emphasis on a “parklike” setting and visual connections to nature set the tone for the design of the new senior living community. An exact opening date for the center has not yet been announced, but the website states it will open sometime in 2024. 972-996-3887. theoutlookatwindhaven.org

By Erick Pirayesh

Reporter, Plano/Richardson

Erick Pirayesh joined Community Impact Newspaper in May 2021. He is a graduate of the University of Northern Colorado Journalism and Media Studies program. He previously served as editor-in-chief of The Channels student newspaper in Santa Barbara, California.